And pales the best, the boldest daunts. The column halts: Close, and advance, Said Washington, Disarm at once That height! --no movement, no response; Wavered the Pennsylvania line; Great God, he said. my life is thine! Few heard him, but each eye was strained, When moving to the front, he reined His charger in, and, wheeling, right Before the battery held him checked; Like some grand statue in their sight He sat there silent, calm, erect. Confronting death: one momenta s hush, Then with a whirlwind s sudden rush, Before the battery once more Can shake the summit with its roar, Bight up the hill, upon the run, They charged, and captured every gun On Princeton...
