To shew that the expansion of (1 x)n by the Binomial Theorem is convergent wien x 1. Let ur, url represent the rth and (r l)th terms of the expansion; then u r r When rn, this ratio is negative; that is, from this point the terms are alternately positive and negative when x is positive, and always of the same sign when x is negative. Now when r is infinite, Lim---- x numerically; therefore since x 1 the series is convergent if all the terms are of the same sign; and therefore a fortiori it is convergent when some of the terms are positive and some negative. Art. 283. 293. To shew that the expansion of ax in ascending powers ofyiis convergent for every value qx. Here------; and therefore lam----1 whatever be the value of x; hence the series is convergent. 294. To shew that the expansion of log(l x) in ascending powers of x is convergent when x is numerically less than 1. Here the numerical value of-------x, which in the limit u, n n--1 is equal to x; hence the series is convergent when x is less than 1. If x, the serf vergent. Art. 280. If x --l, the series becomes--1--jr--Q-t--, and is divergent. Art. 290. This shews that the logarithm of zero is infinite and negative, as is otherwise evident from the equation e-0. 295. The results of the two following examples are important, and will...
